

Tami Halton Pardee

As the founder and CEO of Halton Pardee + Partners in Los Angeles, California, Tami Halton Pardee is an award-winning rockstar real estate broker. She has represented A-list celebrities, tech industry pioneers, and advised architects like Frank Gehry and Marmol Radziner on their developments. But it is as the founder of Life Change Warriors that she lives out her motto “Star in the life you love.”

Pardee has always put her heart into the communities she serves, but a 2001 diagnosis of multiple sclerosis set Pardee on her current path, inspiring her to use her platform and her business acumen to help others.

In the past 14 years, Halton Pardee + Partners has donated more than $1.3 million toward uplifting underserved areas of Venice and West Los Angeles.

In June 2017, she and her partners created the Life Change Warriors foundation. Their first beneficiaries were a group of women at Harvest Home, a local Venice non-profit organization serving young homeless and pregnant women.

The foundation is designed to allow people from all walks of life to face their fears, set goals and have a life plan for achieving their dreams. From coaching homeless pregnant women to helping underprivileged youth tap into the arts, Pardee’s passion is for transformation and providing the tools to achieve it. She herself teaches the sessions along with two life coaches. Programs take place both at the Halton Pardee + Partners office in Mar Vista or at the site of its nonprofit partner Harvest Home and Venice Arts. Upon completion of the program, a graduation ceremony is held in Pardee’s home, where she gives each Harvest Home participant $2,500 toward housing.

